ABSTRACT

This publication defines and outlines the state of Oregon's common curriculum goals for art education, an area of study that addresses the components of art production, art heritage, aesthetics, and art criticism. An overall goal for each one of these four strands is established, and content specific knowledge and skills that students should possess by the time they complete a particular grade level are enumerated. A fifth strand addresses those essential learning skills viewed as necessary to a student's success in learning about art and not specifically addressed in the previous four strands. This fifth strand focuses on goals in communication skills. An evaluation form concludes the document. (DB)

Oregon Schools—A Tradition of Excellence

FOREWORD

Following the adoption of the Oregon Action Plan for Excellence in 1984, the State Board of Education embarked on a curriculum improvement project to define the goals of education for all public school students in Oregon. These goals, called common curriculum goals, have been developed by the state in all required subject areas with the assistance of numerous teachers, administrators and other interested citizens.

This document provides the common curriculum goals for art education, an area of study that addresses the components of art production, art heritage, aesthetics and art criticism. These goals, for many, will represent a major new direction in the development and instruction of art education. The goals establish a balance between the knowledge and skills students need to perceive, understand, value and judge the designed world with the more traditional goals related to the making of student art. In addition, the goals represent a balance between what art education contributes uniquely to the lives of individuals and our society and its support of the goals and outcomes of general education. The implementation of this type of balanced program ensures art education as an integral and meaningful part of each student's total educational preparation and experience.

We continue to learn how to provide Oregon's children with the very best in public education. In this spirit, the staff at the Oregon Department of Education welcomes your comments and questions. For further information about these goals and their implementation, please contact the Visual Arts Education Specialist directly at 378-3602.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Grateful acknowledgment is made to the following people for the many hours they have contributed to the development of the common curriculum goals in art education. They shared their ideas and experiences as classroom teachers, as administrators, and as teachers of teachers throughout numerous development and writing meetings. Each contributed a unique perspective to the content, importance and achievability of the goals in the final document. Additional acknowledgment goes to the school districts and colleges for providing release time for these individuals to work on this publication. Finally, thank you to over two hundred educators throughout the state who were given the opportunity to review the drafts of the Art Education Common Curriculum Goals in January, 1990.

INTRODUCTION

THE OREGON ACTION PLAN FOR EXCELLENCE

The Action Plan identified seven areas of improvement, one of which called for a statewide definition of what students should learn:

The Oregon Department of Education, working with local school districts and higher education institutions, shall define the required common curriculum goals for elementary and secondary schools in terms of the learning skills and knowledge students are expected to possess as a result of their schooling experience.

Local school districts, with assistance from the Oregon Department of Education, shall be responsible for organizing the curriculum and delivering instruction to achieve the common curriculum goals.

Common Curriculum Goals

The first stage in defining the Common Curriculum Goals was to develop the Essential Learning Skills — the basic skill and performance expectations for all students in the areas of reading, writing, speaking, listening, mathematics, reasoning and study skills. The second and present stage is to develop Common Knowledge and Skills in individual subject areas. Together with the Essential Learning Skills, they form the Common Curriculum Goals for all students.

A. Essential Learning Skills

The Essential Learning Skills are considered basic to all students' learning, and all teachers are expected to provide instruction in these skills. Only to the degree that students develop these skills and form the habit of using them, can instruction in subject matter areas be successful. The skills are not specific to any one discipline but provide a link across all disciplines. Furthermore, the skills do not grow in isolation from content, they are strengthened through practice and use in all subject areas.

B. Common Knowledge and Skills

Looking beyond the Essential Learning Skills, this document defines more fully what are considered to be essentials in a quality art education program. Each district will want to extend and elaborate upon this base in order to create its own unique, comprehensive art education curriculum. Students should have the opportunity to demonstrate their achievement in a variety of ways. Equal opportunity to learn and the special needs of students are primary considerations in determining acceptable levels of performance.

State Standards

The Common Curriculum Goals as presented in this document receive their authority from the Oregon State Standards for Public Schools, OAR 581-22-420 and 581-22-425. These rules were amended by the State Board of Education in January 1986.

PHILOSOPHY/RATIONALE

A primary goal of education in a democracy is to make available to all students the full spectrum of ideas and experiences that comprise human knowledge. That knowledge base includes studies in the sciences, the humanities and the arts. In the first two areas, our schools have a tradition of excellence in curriculum and instruction. But education in the arts has too often been relegated to a lesser status in the day-to-day learning experiences of our children.

In an era of school excellence and school improvement, one perspective of quality education is to ensure that each subject area taught in schools reflects the best in contemporary knowledge and practices. Theory and research in art education is currently redefining the structure and content of a quality art program. Generally, this includes a multifaceted approach to art education emphasizing both expressive (i.e., art production) and receptive (i.e., art heritage, aesthetics and art criticism) components. Often referred to as discipline-based art education (DBAE), this approach offers students the opportunity to prepare for a lifetime of meaningful interaction with the visual arts in all its forms.

Beyond the basic structure of a multifaceted art program, this document supports a view of art education as.

- A. An opportunity for students to learn to create, view, interpret and respond to the designed world from a variety of personal, cultural and historic perspectives rather than focusing solely on the making of isolated, material-oriented projects.
- B. Primarily a content area with a variety of unique knowledges and skills rather than as an activity to assist learning in other subjects.
- C. Important to the general education of all students rather than as primarily intended for those with a demonstrated talent in art
- D. A subject to be sequentially and regularly taught through a variety of instructional techniques rather than generally limiting the instructional strategy to art making alone.
- E. A subject designed to include studies of a wide variety of fine arts, functional arts and environmental arts rather than limiting study to the traditional arts such as drawing, painting and sculpture.
- F. An opportunity to learn about the art of other times and other cultures including those not historically recognized in resources emphasizing a European heritage.
- G. An opportunity to examine a wide variety of art in both original and reproduced forms.

By any meaningful standard, the arts have always been an integral part of human history, knowledge and experience. This philosophy presumes that instruction in art, based on contemporary approaches to the subject, benefits the students' abilities to create unique solutions to problems, to better perceive and understand the designed world, to contribute as consumers and as producers to the quality of visual objects and environments, and to understand and value the art heritage of their own and other cultures. Without these understandings, the potential contributions of art to the lives of all our children and citizens will remain unrealized and art will continue to be viewed generally as the domain of the artists and/or those with the wealth and leisure to enjoy them in the isolation of galleries and museums.

Curriculum Design

This document, among the latest in the initial cycle of common curriculum goals, was developed by various working committees after making a number of decisions that are consistent with both contemporary curriculum thought and with an eye to the elementary classroom teacher as the ultimate audience.

- A. The goals should reflect current theory, research and development in art education.
- B. The goals should be limited to a manageable number, primarily in recognition of the amount of time available for art education in the elementary grades. Hence, the document is not comprehensive in scope, but rather seeks to describe essential learnings in art education that should be regularly planned, instructed and assessed.
- C. The goals, in recognition that many elementary teachers have had limited opportunities to learn about art, should be written in clear language with a minimum of technical language.
- D. The goals, although mandated for grades K-6, should be viewed as a basis for the K-12 art education program. Districts are encouraged to continue to develop grade-level expectations for the secondary art program based on the goals.
- E. The Essential Learning Skills should be incorporated into the document in a manner that reflects a reasonable balance between the development of foundational skills and the acquisition of content knowledge specific to art.

- F The goals should focus on providing a conceptual knowledge base as an avenue toward the development of the more affective goals often associated with art education. Individual creativity, expression and valuing of the arts is enhanced by multiple opportunities to use basic conceptual understanding in unique and personal ways.
- G In describing the what rather than the how, the goals also describe the needed direction of future teacher preparation and staff development. However, the document itself does not provide those knowledges and skills in art education necessary for full implementation.

ORGANIZATION

The Art Education Common Curriculum Goals have been organized into five (5) strands. The first four strands (1.0-4.0) include the content specific knowledge and skills that comprise the basic components of a multifaceted art education program. The strands include:

1.0 Art Production. The student will be able to develop the technical and problem-solving skills necessary for creative communication and personal expression in art production.

2.0 Art Heritage. The student will be able to explain/demonstrate ways that artists and art work record and reflect cultures.

3.0 Art Criticism: The student will be able to develop the knowledge and skills necessary to make informed responses to works of art.

4.0 Aesthetic Understanding. The student will be able to express individual understandings of art by developing perceptual and thinking skills.

The final strand (5.0) addresses those Essential Learning Skills viewed as necessary to a student's success in learning about art that had not been specifically addressed in the previous four strands. This strand includes:

5.0 Communication Skills. The student will be able to acquire appropriate communication skills to gain information and express ideas about art.

1.0 The student will be able to develop the technical and problem-solving skills necessary for creative communication and personal expression in art production.

	^c Combine two or more elements of design in student art work (e.g., smooth line, bright colors and geometric shapes)	^c Apply the elements of design to achieve a specific effect based on an assignment given by the teacher (e.g., teacher: "Create a strong sculpture using powerful or strong colors, shapes and textures")	^c Apply one or more elements of design to achieve a specific effect determined by the student (e.g., student: "I used dull, cool colors and limp shapes to create a sad mood")
	^d Recognize individual principles of composition (e.g., repetition, rhythm, balance, emphasis, unity)	^d Demonstrate in work how principles of composition function as basic ways to arrange elements of design (e.g., repetition created through the use of repeated colors, shapes and/or textures)	^d Manipulate elements of design and principles of composition to produce a desired effect (e.g., use line, shape and color to produce a pattern)
